Turning refugees into entrepreneurs

■ A difficult trip to help some desperate people

By PAUL MILLER

THE FRESH bullet holes in the U.S. Embassy in N'Djamena were a clue: Vaughn Feather was not in for a leisurely trip to central Africa. And he didn't want one.

"Last year I had finished a business consulting program, and I had some wanderlust," he told The Pine Cone after returning home to Carmel. "I decided I should get involved in some kind of humanitarian program."

Because of a long-standing interest in Africa, he decided that's where he wanted to make a difference.

And thanks to a friend of a friend, he chose a unique program for his efforts: Rising International, headquartered in Felton, which bolsters third-world economies by helping the poorest of the poor — in places such as Afghanistan, Bosnia and Rwanda — turn their local crafts and handiworks into products that can be sold in the United States.

"In some of these situations, the people are so desperate, what they really need is help getting three meals a day," said Carmel Jud, founder of Rising International, which has operations in more than 30 countries. "We look for an entrepreneurial opportunity that will help them — without it being charity."

"Pretty quickly she arrived at Chad as a great possibi-ty for me to help," Feather said. The local economy is in tatters, and a flood of refugees from neighboring Darfur has added to the woes. Rising International's goal was to set up basic export businesses in some of the refugee camps.

"The traditional model of charity isn't working, and the people we work with will tell you that," Jud said. "Nobody

Speedy, stealthy burglars hit Carmel Plaza

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER REMOVING an entire plate glass window from its frame to enter the store early Friday morning, professional thieves took less than three minutes to stuff two large duffel bags with $80,000 worth of purses and belts from Louis Vuitton and escape, according to Carmel police.

The heist occurred three months after burglars crept into a rear hallway, cut through a wall of another Carmel Plaza store, The Cheese Shop, and stole more than $15,000 worth of rare wines.

Just before daybreak May 23, the burglars, cloaked in black and wearing masks, removed a strip from the base of the 6.5-foot-by-4-foot window and then peeled the rest of the rubber trim away.

"They lifted the window out and walked right in," said Sgt. Mike Calhoun. "Since they removed it without breaking it, they had to know either a glazier or had some window experience to know how."

Two more dogs in 'vicious' hearing

By KELLY NIX

TWO SEARCH and rescue dogs that attacked a woman and her Labrador in Pacific Grove five months ago must be moved out of town or permanently restrained, a hearing officer ruled last week.

The decision, issued May 20 by Robert E. Davis, comes after a Dec. 30, 2007, attack by the two dogs, both German shepherds, on the Lab as she was getting into a car.

The dog hearing, the second in the city's history, came about 10 months after KION TV anchorwoman Olga Ospina's Maltese was fatally mauled by a Labrador and a German shepherd in front of the P.G. post office July 25, 2007. Those dogs was banned from the city.

In the December attack, the two German shepherds, Lola, 2, and Bear, 11, owned by Monty Reitz, jumped Reitz' 4-foot fence and ran toward Tule, a 2-year-old female Labrador owned by Casey Conover Houston, and began biting the dog, according to Davis' report. Houston had been visiting her

'Last Forbidden Kingdom' on display at Sunset

By CHRIS COUNTS

WINDSWEPT AND nearly devoid of vegetation, the remote Nepalese district of Mustang is a place where fried yak dung and goat droppings serve as cooking fuel, where sheep horns hang over doorways to chase away evil spirits and where firewood is considered a sign of wealth.

And yet Mustang is also home to a collection of ancient Buddhist art so impressive that Carmel photographer Kenneth Parker has made three trips there since 2003 to capture what he calls "The Last Forbidden Kingdom."

An exhibit of Parker's photographs, "Buddhist Earth: Sacred Places/Sacred Work," opens Friday, May 30, at the Center for Photographic Art. The gallery will host a reception from 6 to 8 p.m.

Surrounded by some of the world's highest mountains and bordering Chinese Tibet, Mustang is home to about 9,000 hardy residents.

"It is very difficult to reach," he explained. "There are no roads. It takes a week to hike in."

On his last trip to Mustang in 2006, Parker was accompanied by a crew of 12 people and 15 horses. The pack animals carried, among other things, large-format cameras, generators, cables and state-of-the-art lighting equipment. The expedition was sponsored by the American Himalayan Foundation, which is funded primarily by private donors.

PROLIFIC LOCAL BLACK WIDOWS SPARE THEIR MATES

By CHRIS COUNTS

THANKS TO the work of two spider researchers from Canada, the folks at Camel Valley's Hastings Natural History Reserve have had an opportunity to reexamine some of the myths surrounding the most feared, and perhaps most misunderstood, of arachnids — the black widow.

It turns out the local variety of the poisonous spider, the Western black widow, doesn't eat its mate. But perhaps even more unusual is how common the black widow is — especially in Carmel Valley, researchers say.

A Carmel Valley black widow, who's probably not a widow.
